

Immigration Workplace Compliance in the Construction World

Will your I-9 documentation withstand a government audit?
Do you know what to do if the government investigates your worksite?
Are you prepared for recent and proposed changes in state and Federal laws relating to workforce employment authorization?

If your business is involved in the real estate development and construction industries, employs a number of unskilled or low-skilled workers, and/or relies on subcontractors to provide critical services, then these and other questions related to workplace immigration compliance concern you.
