

What “Tipped” the Cases?

Tuesday, August 15, 2006

12:00 PM (EST)

A jury verdict against the Hilltop Steak House and the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court’s decision concerning Locke-Ober restaurant, both involving retaliation claims by employees who complained about their employers’ compliance with the Massachusetts Tip Statute, have garnered much publicity. Retaliation claims present significant challenges to all employers so the implications of these cases reach beyond the hospitality industry. Join us for a conference call and discussion on what all employers should take away from these cases.
