Ridhima supports Seyfarth attorneys as they guide clients through the intricate terrain of labor and employment law.

More About Ridhima

Ridhima assists attorneys with their clients' employment law matters, ranging from complex class actions to single-plaintiff cases.

During her time in law school, Ridhima worked for a nonprofit organization dedicated to assisting victims of domestic violence, including many who were foreign nationals facing immigration issues. In this role, she demonstrated exceptional dedication and empathy, providing critical legal support to individuals in highly vulnerable situations. Additionally, Ridhima's participation in moot court allowed her to sharpen her advocacy and legal writing skills. Later, as a coach, she enhanced her leadership and mentoring abilities, guiding other law students through legal research and oral arguments.
